

EMPLOYING TECHNOLOGY TO ERODE LEGAL EDUCATION'S TWIN BARRIERS OF DISTANCE AND COST*

*Peter W. Martin

This symposium has assembled a remarkable group of thoughtful and experienced legal educators. Nonetheless, there is a risk posed by who we are. As committed participants in American Bar Association accredited J.D. programs (varied though they may be) it is hard for us to escape accepting key elements of our shared enterprise as givens – elements that may seem puzzling, even problematic, to outsiders – such as educators preparing students for other professions or would-be attorneys for whom the degree our institutions offer is a pre-requisite.

I. THOSE UNABLE TO MOVE TO OR COMMUTE TO A LAW SCHOOL

An email message that arrived at the end of March offers such a perspective. It came unbidden, from a military veteran living and working in upstate New York. My correspondent explained that while in the military he began work toward a J.D. through an accredited law school's evening program. His military commitment ended well before completion of that degree and the ensuing search for employment led him to my state and region. The writer described himself as married with two small children, his family's sole breadwinner. The dilemma he outlined boiled down to this:

Completing the requirements for a J.D. now seemed beyond reach. He could not afford to relocate his family. His full-time employment precluded attendance at daytime classes. No law school in upstate New York has a part-time evening program. No ABA-accredited law school located elsewhere offers a J.D. in a format that he can reasonably access from where he and his family now live.¹

* © Peter W. Martin, 2009. This work is licensed under the Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-ShareAlike 3.0 License. To view a copy of this license, visit <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/> or send a letter to Creative Commons, 543 Howard Street, 5th Floor, San Francisco, California, 94105, USA.

 Jane M.G. Foster Professor of Law, Cornell Law School.

1. I have taken some liberty in characterizing the message. In fact, the writer reported he was attempting to continue his studies through the part-time evening program of the Western New England College School of Law located some eighty miles from his home. The commute, three evenings a week, seemed unsustainable.

I shall return to the particulars of this case, but before doing so, I feel a need to explain why I believe they warrant our attention. First, to those for whom New York is synonymous with the Big Apple and immediately adjacent communities, I should note that the rest of the state (“upstate”), constituting the overwhelming majority of its geography, is inhabited by over ten million people.² Were New York City to secede, upstate New York would be at least the thirteenth largest state by population.³ Across the 388 miles that stretch between its borders with Pennsylvania on the west and Massachusetts on the east are scattered four law schools, all ABA approved.⁴ (Like most states, New York does not itself accredit law schools that the ABA has not approved.)⁵ In relation to the upstate population, four is a respectable number. Washington State, which is in fact the thirteenth most populous state,⁶ has but three.⁷ Moreover, those in upstate New York are more widely dispersed.⁸ The city of Rochester, center of a metropolitan area with over two hundred thousand inhabitants,⁹ has no law school, but Buffalo, Ithaca, Syracuse, and Albany have one apiece.¹⁰ As my correspondent pointedly observed, however, only one of the four (Albany) offers a part-time program, and its classes are not scheduled at times available to someone working conventional business hours.¹¹

Half the nation’s population lives outside the forty largest metropolitan areas where law school programs are most densely

2. The Cal. Higher Educ. Pol’y Ctr., The Context of Governance: People and Politics, <http://www.capolicycenter.org/ny/ny2.html> (last visited Sept. 10, 2009).

3. See id.; U.S. Census Bureau, National and State Population Estimates, <http://www.census.gov/popest/states/NST-ann-est.html> (last visited Sept. 10, 2009).

4. AllLaw.com, New York Law Schools, http://www.alllaw.com/state_resources/new_york/law_students/ (last visited July 29, 2009).

5. See N.Y. CT. RULES FOR ADMISSION OF ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS AT LAW § 520.3(b)(2). But see N.Y. CT. RULES FOR ADMISSION OF ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS AT LAW § 520.5 (allowing graduates of non-ABA-accredited law schools to sit for the New York bar exam if they have been admitted to the bar in another state and have practiced there for five years).

6. See U.S. Census Bureau, supra note 3.

7. Alllaw.com, Washington Law Schools, http://www.alllaw.com/state_resources/washington/law-schools/ (last visited July 29, 2009).

8. Alllaw.com, New York Law Schools, http://www.alllaw.com/state_resources/new_york/law-schools/ (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

9. U.S. Census Bureau, State and County QuickFacts, Rochester, <http://quickfacts.census.gov/qfd/states/36/3663000.html> (last visited Sept. 9, 2009).

10. Alllaw.com, New York Law Schools, http://www.alllaw.com/state_resources/New_York/law_schools/ (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

11. See Albany Law Sch., First-Year Sample Schedules, http://www.albanylaw.edu/sub.php?navigation_id=1128 (last visited July 11, 2009).

concentrated.¹² (Three-quarters of the law schools in New York State and all of those offering part-time evening programs are located in the New York City metropolitan area.¹³ The legal education options in Illinois are similarly concentrated in Chicago.¹⁴) A number of states (e.g., the Dakotas, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico) have only one law school.¹⁵ Typically, it is located in a major urban setting and offers no part-time degree option.¹⁶ One state, Alaska, is altogether without a law school.¹⁷ As the University of Alaska's pre-law adviser's office explains to undergraduates there who want to practice law: "[Alaskans] must plan on leaving the state for their course of study."¹⁸ In short, there is good reason to believe that my upstate New York correspondent has plenty of company throughout the United States.

II. FORMATS EMPLOYED IN OTHER FIELDS

A comparative look at programs leading to other advanced professional degrees may help highlight the distinctive access barriers faced by would-be law students rooted in communities without part-time law programs. To draw that comparison, let us consider the educational options open to several other individuals. Two have an interest in law, but do not require a J.D.; they are a young lawyer practicing in Buffalo and a health care worker in Rochester or Syracuse. The former wants to acquire an LL.M. in tax; the latter, to gain greater understanding of the law bearing on her field. Two others have ambitions that call for graduate study in other fields. These are a high school teacher who aspires to educational administration and a deeply committed Lutheran who has resolved to become a pastor. Assume that all four of these individuals are, like my correspondent, held in upstate New York by employment and other ties.

In past writing on this subject,¹⁹ I have used a taxonomy that

12. See U.S. Census Bureau, 2009 Statistical Abstract, tbls. 12 & 19 (2009), <http://www.census.gov/compendia/statab/cats/population.html> (last visited Sept. 14, 2009).

13. See Law Sch. Admission Council, Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools, <http://officialguide.lsac.org/search/GeographicSearch.aspx> (last visited Sept. 14, 2009).

14. See id.

15. Id.

16. See id.

17. See id.

18. Univ. of Ala. Anchorage, Pre-law Advising, <http://justice.uaa.alaska.edu/academic/prelaw.html> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

19. See Peter W. Martin, Employing Distance Learning Approaches to Improve and Expand Access to Part-Time J.D. Programs (Jan. 7, 2005), <http://www.aals.org/am2005/fripapers/830martin.pdf>.

distinguishes educational programs according to the terms on which they present themselves to potential students. First, there are “move to” programs. My own school’s J.D. program is, for all but a handful of nearby residents, available only on “move to” terms. Those who would enroll must resettle in Ithaca, New York for three years of full-time study.²⁰ Cornell has no part-time program.²¹ Alternatives to “move to” programs include “commute to” ones, those available on “periodically travel to” terms, and, finally, programs that can be pursued “wherever, whenever.”²² Some “commute to” programs are configured so as to allow participation by fully employed individuals; some are not.²³ Those of the “periodically travel to” and “wherever, whenever” varieties are specifically designed with such students in mind.²⁴ “Wherever, whenever” J.D. programs are unambiguously excluded from ABA approval.²⁵ The Association’s accreditation standards have also discouraged law schools’ establishment of “periodically travel to” options. While weekend programs like those of Hamline²⁶ and Thomas Cooley²⁷ expand potential commuting access to their courses, they still require weekly class attendance. True “periodically travel to” programs schedule onsite instruction far less frequently.²⁸

Alternatives available to the hypothetical upstate teacher illustrate all three non-“move to” categories. Seeking a master’s degree in educational administration or conceivably a doctorate, this individual might enroll in any of the several part-time masters and doctorate programs with evening classes available at universities in the region.²⁹ If within range of the University of Buffalo or the University of Rochester, for example, the “commute to” format is an option.³⁰ A highly respected “periodically travel to” doctorate is

20. Id. at 1.

21. Cornell Univ. Law Sch., Admission and Preparation, http://www.lawschool.cornell.edu/admissions/FAQ/admission_and_preparation.cfm (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

22. Martin, supra note 19, at 1.

23. Id. at 2.

24. See id. at 1.

25. Id. at 5.

26. See Hamline Univ. Law Sch., Part-time Weekend Program, <http://law.hamline.edu/node/1292> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

27. See Thomas M. Cooley Law Sch., The Weekend Schedule, <http://www.cooley.edu/academics/weekendschedule.htm> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

28. See Martin, supra note 19, at 2.

29. See PhDs.org, Master’s and Ph.D Programs in Education Administration, <http://graduate-school.phds.org/find/programs/education-administration> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

30. See Univ. of Buffalo, Graduate School of Education, <http://www.gse.buffalo.edu/> available from Columbia University's Teachers College.³¹ It requires spending the month of July in New York City and traveling to the Teachers College campus for monthly weekend sessions during fall and spring terms over three years.³² Lastly, numerous universities now offer online programs leading to advanced degrees in educational leadership.³³ The University of Massachusetts is one with such a "wherever, whenever" program.³⁴

The aspiring Lutheran pastor has fewer options. Should she be within commuting distance of Rochester, there are two Masters of Divinity programs with evening and weekend classes.³⁵ Both purport to be ecumenical, but neither seems an ideal fit for a Lutheran. Furthermore, should she be located anywhere else in the upstate region even these "commute to" choices would be beyond reach. Fortunately, Luther Seminary in St. Paul, Minnesota, offers a Masters of Divinity in the "periodically travel to" mode.³⁶ The school's distributed learning program consists of a combination of online courses, intensive on campus periods of a week or two in January and June, plus ongoing work with a church in the student's area, culminating in a period of internship.³⁷ It enrolls students living far beyond commuting distance from St. Paul, Minnesota.³⁸ Business schools, including many of the most selective, have long offered executive M.B.A. programs in a similar format, integrating distance learning with short but intense on-campus periods of (last visited Aug. 21, 2009); see also University of Rochester, Warner School of Education, <http://www.rochester.edu/Warner/index.php> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

31. See Teachers College, Columbia Univ., Urban Education Leadership Program, Program Description, <http://uelp.tc.columbia.edu/index.asp?Id=Program+Description&Info=Program+Description> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

32. Id.

33. See generally Online Doctoral Degrees, Education & Teaching, <http://www.onlinedoctoraldegrees.net/doctoral-degree-directory/education-teaching.html> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

34. See UMassOnline, Welcome to UMASSOnline, <http://www.umassonline.net/> (last visited Sept. 10, 2009).

35. See Colgate Rochester Crozer Divinity Sch., Master of Divinity, <http://www.crcds.edu/masterdivinity.asp> (last visited July 11, 2009); Northeastern Seminary, Master of Divinity, <http://www.nes.edu/Programs/MasterofDivinity.aspx> (last visited Sept. 10, 2009).

36. See Luther Seminary – Online Learning, <http://www.luthersem.edu/online/> (last visited Sept. 10, 2009).

37. See Luther Seminary, Courses, http://www.luthersem.edu/mdiv_distributed/courses.asp?m=-3191 (last visited Sept. 10, 2009).

38. See Numbers: A Look at the Second Cohort, 3 DL DISPATCH 2 (Feb. 2009), http://www.luthersem.edu/admissions/degrees/first/mdiv_dl/February09_Newsletter.pdf.

instruction.³⁹ Their existence is a major reason that M.B.A. education is far more accessible than legal education to the population ten years or more out of college.⁴⁰

It is not that formats other than “move to” and “commute to” are unknown in our sector of higher education. The upstate lawyer who wants to gain specialized command of tax law is able to enroll in New York University’s LL.M. program,⁴¹ in which all but two of the credits can be earned online,⁴² or Alabama’s fully online LL.M. in tax.⁴³ The health care professional seeking greater knowledge and understanding of the legal issues surrounding that field can enroll in online masters programs offered by Nova Southeastern,⁴⁴ or, as of 2008, Chicago Loyola, in partnership with Concord Law School.⁴⁵

III. OPERATING OUTSIDE THE ABA PERIMETER - CONCORD

Mention of Concord brings us back at last to my correspondent, for whom the preceding options have no relevance except as they illuminate formats that might make it possible for him to complete his J.D. “Move to” programs are out of the question. No “commute to” evening or weekend programs are within reasonable range.⁴⁶ Frustrating for him and startling, if not shocking, to educators in other fields, is the blunt fact that no ABA-approved school offers a

39. See generally BusinessWeek.com, 2003 Distance MBA Profiles, <http://www.businessweek.com/bschools/030distance.htm> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

40. See Cornell Univ. Law Sch., Breaking Out of Legal Education’s Box, <http://www.law.cornell.edu/background/distance/otb/> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

41. See N.Y. Univ. Law, Executive LL.M. in Tax, <http://www.nyulawtaxllm.org/> (last visited July 29, 2009).

42. See id.

43. See The Univ. of Alabama Sch. of Law, Tax LL.M., <http://www.law.ua.edu/llmtax/> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

44. See Nova Southeastern Univ., Master of Science in Health Law Online, <http://nsulaw.nova.edu/online/mhl/index.cfm> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

45. See Loyola Univ.–Chicago Sch. of Law, Master of Jurisprudence in Health Law for Health Care Professionals Online Degree Program, <http://onlinemj.luc.edu/> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

46. The part-time evening program closest to upstate New York is that offered by Western New England College School of Law in Springfield, Massachusetts. See Western New England College Sch. of Law, Frequently Asked Questions, <http://www.law.wnec.edu/prospective/index.cfm?selection=doc.771> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009). It represents a one-way commute of eighty-six miles from Albany, 230 miles from Syracuse. On the other side of the region there is the University of Akron. See The Univ. of Akron, Visiting Campus, http://www.uakron.edu/admissions/undergraduate/visiting_campus/maps_directions.d (last visited Aug. 21, 2009). It lies 216 miles from Buffalo. Getting to the twin cities of Minnesota every weekend for Hamline’s part-time program or to Michigan (Detroit, Lansing, or Grand Rapids) for Thomas Cooley’s is equally infeasible.

J.D. in either the “periodically travel to” or “wherever, whenever” format.

There is at least one well conceived and ably executed J.D. program offered online,⁴⁷ but precisely by virtue of this choice of format Concord Law School’s degree fails to meet ABA accreditation standards.⁴⁸ In a host of ways, those rules confine J.D. education to the “move to” and “commute to” modes and thus block entry into the legal profession for countless individuals.⁴⁹ In addition, the constraints they impose inflate the out-of-pocket and opportunity costs, not to speak of the human wear and tear, for those who are able to find an acceptable law school program within commuting range or are forced into the “move to” option. Concord has been able to operate because the nation’s most populous state, California, does not restrict the practice of law to graduates of ABA approved institutions.⁵⁰ It is one of five distance learning law schools registered with the California State Bar.⁵¹

47. See Concord Law Sch., Juris Doctorate Degree Programs, <http://www.concordlawschool.edu/juris-doctorate-degree.asp> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

48. See generally AM. BAR ASS’N, 2009-2010 ABA STANDARDS FOR APPROVAL OF LAW SCHOOLS (2008), <http://www.abanet.org/legaled/standards/standards.html> (detailing the separate standards by which law schools are evaluated).

49. Standard 304 requires “completion of a course of study in residence of not fewer than 58,000 minutes of instruction time, except as otherwise provided.” Id. at 24. It goes on to insist that “[a]t least 45,000 of these minutes . . . be by attendance in regularly scheduled class sessions at the law school.” Id. Standard 306 allows a few of those 45,000 minutes of instruction to be carried out by distance education methods, but very few – no more than twelve credit units spread more or less evening across the upperclass years. Id. at 29.

50. The California State Board of Bar Examiners accredits a set of California law schools not approved by the ABA and also sets down terms on which graduates of unaccredited California law schools can take the bar exam. See THE STATE BAR OF CAL., TITLE 4: ADMISSIONS AND EDUCATIONAL STANDARDS 9 (2008), http://calbar.ca.gov/calbar/pdfs/rules/Rules_Title4_Div1-Adm-Prac-Law.pdf. There are currently eighteen California law schools that have not been approved by the ABA that are accredited by the California Committee of Bar Examiners. See Cal. S. Law Sch., FAQs, <http://www.cslawschool.com/csls16.htm> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009). Schools that conduct their instruction by correspondence or via the Internet do not qualify for state accreditation. Nonetheless, if they meet criteria established by the State Bar of California, their graduates can qualify for bar admission. See id. Students attending schools in this “registered” category must take and pass a state-administered exam focusing on mastery of standard first year courses before continuing further with their studies. See id. This exam, formally designated the “First-Year Law Students Examination,” is more widely known as California’s “Baby Bar Exam.” See, e.g., Bar None Review, First Year Law Student Exam, <http://www.barnonereview.com/first-year-exam.php> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009) (referring to the First Year Law Students’ Exam as the “Baby Bar Exam”).

51. See THE STATE BAR OF CAL., supra note 50.

Concord's online program is specifically designed for individuals like my upstate New York correspondent. Its methodology renders geographic location a non-issue. Concord students include members of the armed service,⁵² individuals living outside the US, and residents of all fifty states.⁵³ The school's only option is a part-time program with enough scheduling flexibility to accommodate simultaneous employment, including employment that requires extensive travel.⁵⁴ Because of Concord's "wherever, whenever" format, the school's student body demographics are radically different from the U.S. law school norm.⁵⁵ The average age is in the forties rather than twenties.⁵⁶ Forty percent of Concord students possess other graduate degrees upon matriculation.⁵⁷ The school's curriculum is comparable to those at many of the 200 institutions approved by the ABA.⁵⁸ It includes skills courses and supervised internships.⁵⁹ Through a partnership with William Mitchell College of Law, Concord students have, as a "travel to" option, an intensive eight-day trial advocacy program.⁶⁰

Several of the schools represented at this symposium make use of the Law School Survey of Student Engagement (LSSSE) to appraise the effectiveness of their programs.⁶¹ Concord does as well. Compared to the full sample set, Concord's performance on such key questions as "How would rate your overall experience?" and "Would you do it again?" show greater student satisfaction by a statistically significant margin.⁶² Concord students also rate their experience highly on such measures as: interaction with professors, how

52. Concord Law Sch., Concord Student Life, http://info.Concordlawschool.edu/Pages/Student_Life.aspx (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

53. Concord Law Sch., Concord Law Students, http://info.concordlawschool.edu/Pages/Concord_Students.aspx (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

54. Actually, Concord offers two degrees, an executive J.D. which does not entitle the holder to sit for the California bar and a full J.D. which does, assuming satisfactory performance on the first year law students' examination. KAPLAN UNIV., KAPLAN UNIVERSITY CATALOG: CALENDAR YEAR 2007-2008, at 205, 211-12 (2007-2008), http://info.concordlawschool.edu/SiteCollectionDocuments/ku_catalog.pdf.

55. See Concord Law Sch., Concord Law Students, http://info.concordlawschool.edu/Pages/Concord_Students.aspx (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

56. See id.

57. Id.

58. See KAPLAN UNIV., supra note 54, at 205.

59. Id. at 225-29.

60. See id. at 228.

61. See Law School Survey of Student Engagement, <http://lssse.iub.edu/index.cfm> (last visited Sept. 10, 2009).

62. E-mail from Barry Currier, Dean, Concord Law School, to author (Mar. 26, 2009) (on file with author).

demanding they found the work, development of critical thinking skills, and level of debt (minimal) on graduation.⁶³

That last point introduces another striking fact about a Concord J.D. – its cost. The school's current tuition for a year of part-time study is $9,600.⁶⁴ Assuming some increase over the four-year period leading to its J.D., that amounts to a total figure around $40,000. Not only does that represents a fraction of the out-of-pocket cost of a part-time J.D. at ABA “commute to” programs, where they exist, it fails to account for the savings implicit in a format that does not require students to travel from where they live and work on a fixed schedule, several times a week.

Legal educators who have not paid attention to what Concord has accomplished outside the ABA perimeter, in only a decade's time, need to take a close look. As of February 2009, 235 of its graduates had been admitted to practice in California.⁶⁵

IV. ADVICE

The email message from my upstate New York correspondent ended with a straightforward request: “[P]lease let me know if you have any advice.”⁶⁶ In reply I wrote of the high regard I have for Concord's program and how impressed I have been with the Concord students I have taught online over a span of six years. I concluded, however, that I could not in good conscience at present recommend the school to individuals planning to seek bar admission in states other than California.⁶⁷ That discouraging conclusion bears directly on the advice I have for those responsible for ABA accredited legal education.

63. Id.

64. Concord Law Sch., Tuition and Fees, <http://info.concordlawschool.edu/Pages/Tuition.aspx> (last visited Sept. 10, 2009).

65. Concord Law School Fact Sheet (Mar. 2009) (on file with author).

66. See supra note 1 and accompanying text.

67. The success of Concord's Executive J.D. program reveals a demand for legal education among students whose plans do not include bar admission. In addition, after admission in California, and in some cases a period of practice, individual Concord graduates have been able to persuade bar authorities in a number of other jurisdictions to allow them to sit for their exams. Concord Law Sch., Law School Accreditation, <http://info.concordlawschool.edu/Pages/accreditation.aspx> (last visited on Sept. 10, 2009). By this arduous and uncertain route they have been admitted to practice in D.C., Georgia, Maryland, Washington, Wisconsin, and Vermont. Massachusetts has just been added to the list. Press Release, Concord Law Sch., Concord Law School Grad to Be Sworn in Massachusetts Bar (June 22, 2009), <http://www.digital50.com/news/138712>; Law School Academic Support Blog, http://lawprofessors.typepad.com_academic_support/advice/ (last visited Sept. 10, 2009). A Concord graduate gained access to the bar exam through an appeal to the state's highest court. See Mitchell v. Bd. of Bar Examiners, 897 N.E.2d 7 (Mass. 2008).

To the ABA's Section on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar my advice is: Let go of the claim of law school exceptionalism. In the comprehensive review of accreditation standards now underway,⁶⁸ replace those rules that insist on particular formats and inputs (minutes of classroom instruction, residence, use of physical spaces called libraries and classrooms)⁶⁹ with assessments of educational efficacy. Failure to do so will allow Concord and other schools operating off a California base to expand their head start with less costly and more flexible formats, and may ultimately threaten both the ABA's recognition as an accrediting agency by the Department of Education and the widespread reliance on the ABA seal of approval by state bar admission rules.

Second, to any law school operating within the envelope defined by current ABA accreditation standards whose market is regional and who has part-time students or sees value in enrolling them, my advice is to use every bit of room created by the current distance learning standard and interpretation. Employ the flexibility it allows to expand access to your degree by reducing the number and frequency of times students must travel to your facility. With creative rearrangement a great deal is possible. If current standards pose a problem, seek a variance pursuant to Standard 802.⁷⁰ If you lack critical capacity on your own, think about a partnership and do not ignore Concord as a potential partner.

Third, I am convinced that significant advantage will be reaped by the first ABA approved school to offer a "periodically travel to" J.D.. Several years ago, one US law school drew up detailed plans for such a program.⁷¹ While that school's faculty suffered a failure of nerve, the blueprint they left for others is both attractive and easy to summarize. It took the number of contact hours required by the ABA and bunched them in three "periods of intensive work each semester, one at the beginning, one in the middle, and one at the end."⁷² In between those compressed on-site days, distance learning tools were to be employed for teacher presentation, discussion, mentoring, and

68. "In September 2008, the Council of the ABA's Section of the Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar began a comprehensive review of the [accreditation standards]." Am. Bar Ass'n, Standards Review Committee, <http://www.abanet.org/legaled/committees/comstandards.html> (last visited Aug. 21, 2009).

69. See generally AM. BAR ASS'N, supra note 48, at 49 (describing the facilities that law schools are required to maintain).

70. Id. at 51.

71. See Martin, supra note 19, at 4.

72. Id.

the submission and critique of student written work.⁷³ “The business plan imagined drawing on a nationwide pool of part-time students” who could fit a “periodically travel to” program into their lives.⁷⁴ This blueprint has yet to be picked up by another institution. It will be. For those law schools with “existing part-time program[s], located in metropolitan areas with good transportation connections and [reasonably priced] short-term accommodations” this untapped opportunity seems compelling.⁷⁵

Finally, to schools whose on-premises programs fail to command the attention and engagement of their students and whose principal attraction lies in geographic proximity to a pool of commuting students my advice is that you will have to learn to make better use of the time you insist students spend in your buildings, else you’ll lose them to the “periodically travel to” and “wherever, whenever” J.D. programs that I see as needed, appropriate, and therefore inevitable.

My advice to all is: Do not ignore successful models of professional education employed both in other fields and in non-ABA accredited legal education.

73. Id. at 5.

74. Id.

75. Id.
